Intercultural Education in Germany

Concepts for immigrants in European Schools:
Stages according to Christina Allemann-Ghionda

Intercultural Education in Germany

Concept for immigrants in Germany

- mother-tongue education
- teaching German as the second language (DaZ-Konzept)
- language ability analysis in the kindergarten
- differentiation of classroom work vs. external differentiation

Intercultural Education in Germany

Cultural orientation: (Bucher/Bonfadelli 2007)

	Kulturelle Orientierung	Swiss orientation	Dualists	home orientation	no orientation	-
Ex-Jugoslawien Kinder		41	27	25	7
Ex-Jugoslawien Eltern		13	35	45	2
Italien, Kinder		41	23	29	7
Italien, Eltern		20	30	48	4
Türkei, Kinder		41	28	24	7

„Swiss studies show that „dualist“ learners read more than native Swiss learners“

(Bachmaier 2007)

Intercultural Education in Germany

Some conclusions:

- migrants are not a homogenous group
- differences in origin and cultural milieu are relevant
- low milieu will present problems for migrants and non migrants
- integration cannot ignore milieu

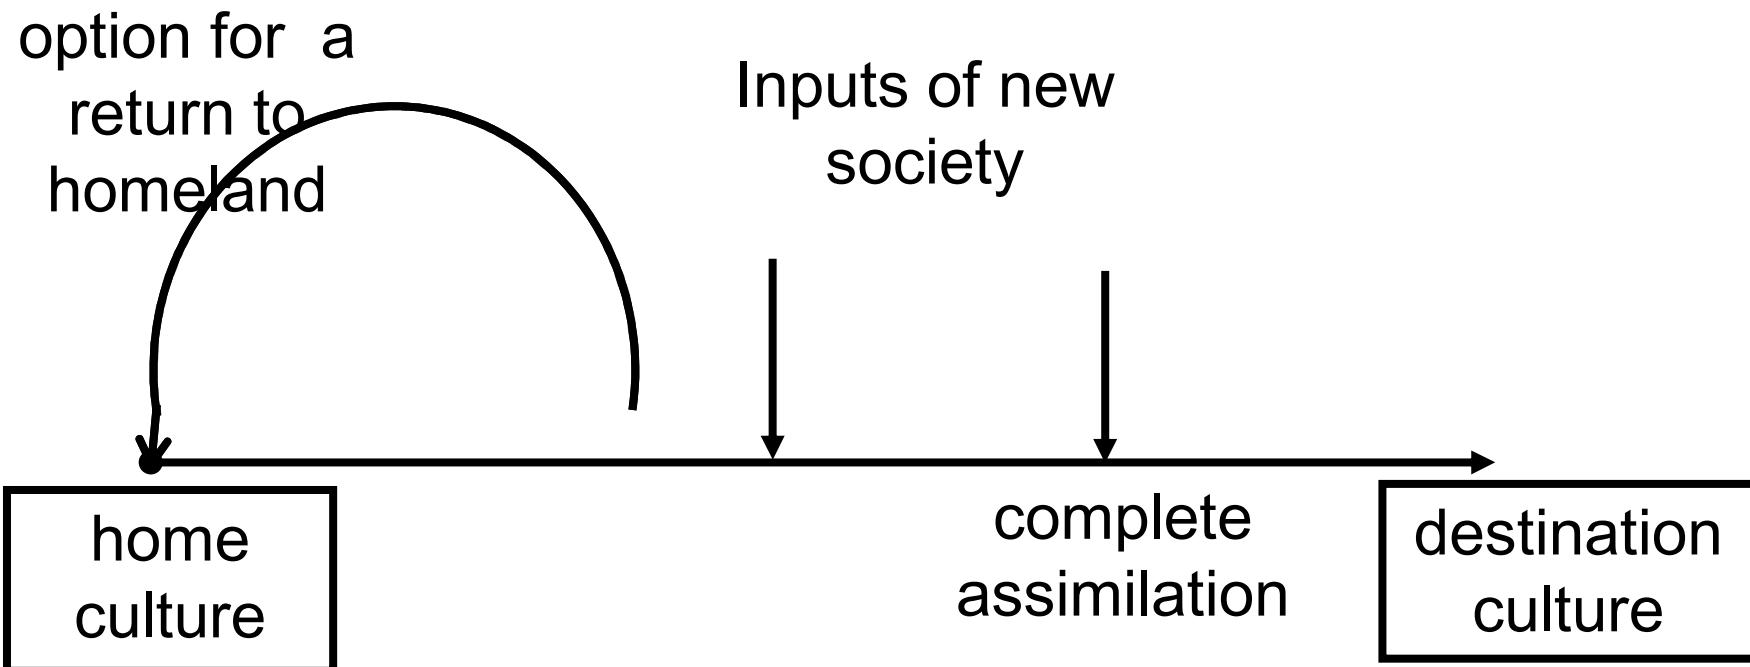

(Christian Alt, Milieu oder Migration - Was zählt mehr? – Translation Horst Kuhley)

Intercultural Education in Germany

Lineary Integration Concept

Integration is seen as a one-way street leading towards full assimilation

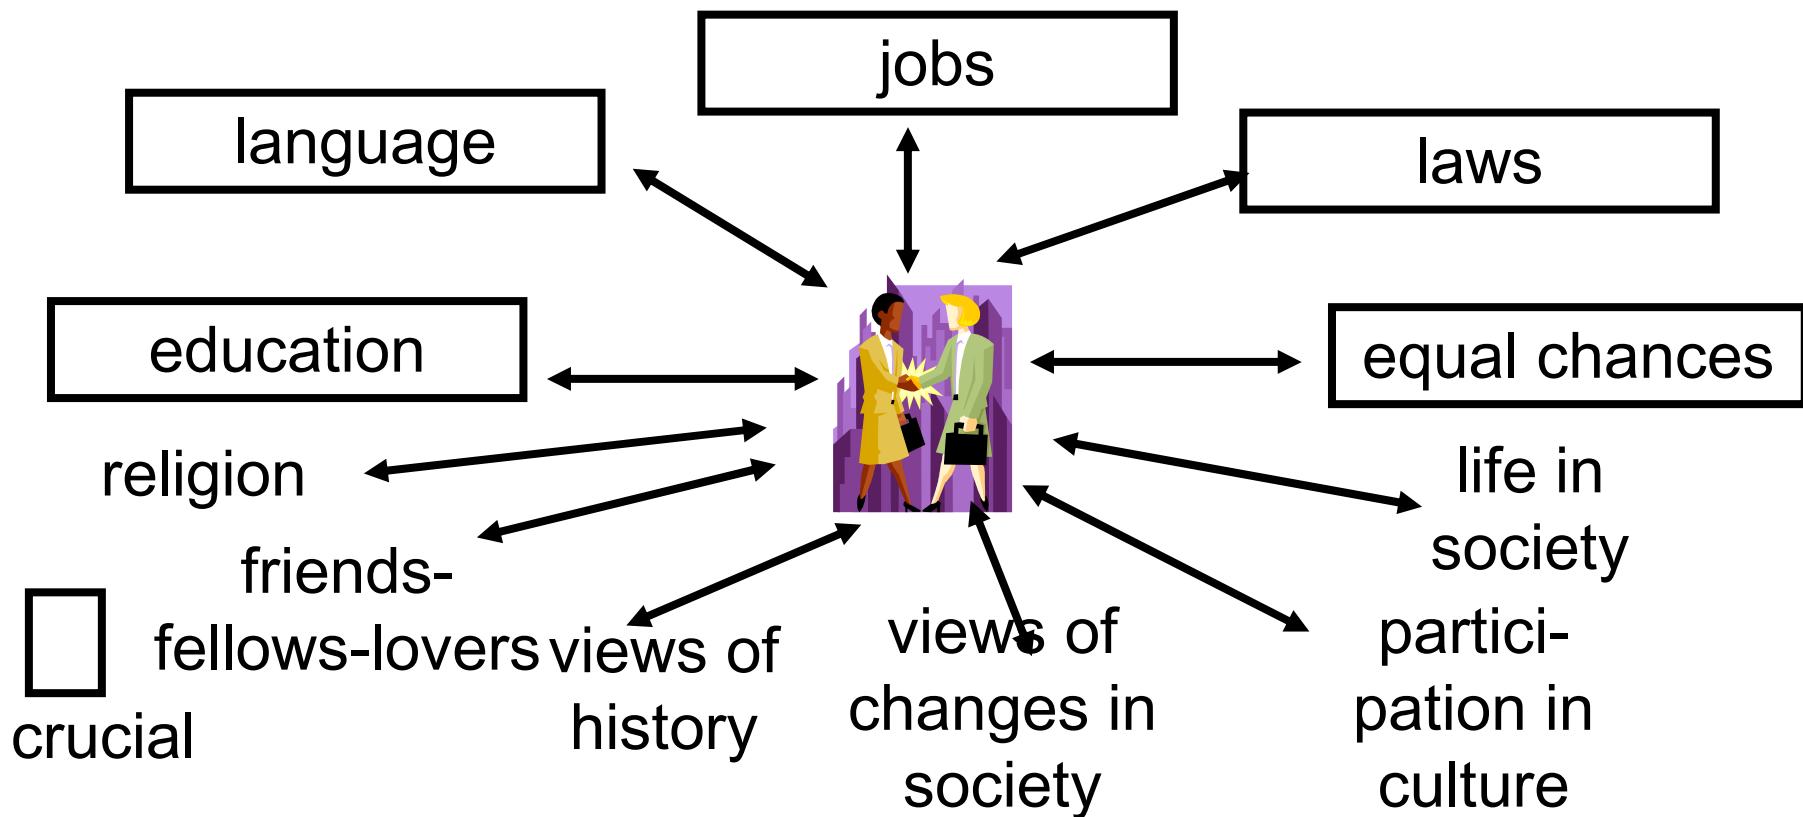

Intercultural Education in Germany

Multi-Dimensional Integration Concept

Integration is seen as a complex net of different fields of which some are crucial and some are only differentiated lifestyles

Intercultural Education in Germany

Towards a revised didactics of Intercultural Education social factors are more important than nationalities

cultural orientations are mightier than ethnicity

Diversification of the term „migrational background“

Clarification of aims for teaching:

- Appropriate remedial help relating to needs not to ethnicity
- Teaching for a chance to „arrive“ in the destination society
- Teaching for professional competencies and life skills
- Help to acquire „world-knowledge“ + content-related vocabulary

Intercultural Education in Germany

Proposals

Teaching for life skills in an intercultural approach:

- a using new teaching standards and new types of classroom tasks (PISA-type) closer to the reality of pupils
- b teaching language skills in real life situations and building competencies in a systematic way
- c building mentoring programs with successful migrants as support for students
